When one's passion is evident from early childhood, it feels like the best sort of foreshadowing. Take Katya Thompson, for example. Once a young girl drawing floor plans in the dirt with a stick before giving her playmates a "home tour," today she is the Principal Interior Designer at her own firm, Artistic Elements. The studio and showroom offers both full-service design and a collection of furnishings and decor from the most exclusive brands around the world. "We want to be each client's creative partner and one-stop shop," Thompson says. "I absolutely love diving into every project. It's like each has its own little piece of my heart, and I pour everything I've got into each. They all deserve that kind of love and attention." That said, while she doesn't have a favorite project, she does have a part of the process that creates an extra sense of joy. "I love designing the lighting. It's the secret sauce that brings the whole concept together."

Top It's easy to see why a photo of this primary bedroom went viral on Artistic Elements' Instagram account, with more than 3.7 million views. Wow factor, indeed!

Eyes On The Product

"My ultimate ambition is to develop a unique range of furniture, lighting, pillows and rugs," Thompson says. "My goal involves not only creating these items but also forging collaborations with established brands to bring my designs to market. I would love the chance to blend my creative vision with the expertise and reach of these organizations, ultimately providing clients with a distinctive, high-quality product line."

“SEEING A PROJECT BRING JOY TO MY CLIENTS IS IMMENSELY GRATIFYING AND DRIVES MY DEDICATION TO DESIGN.”

Joy Of Jet-Setting

What keeps Thompson motivated and energized? "Travel, especially to places like Eastern Europe where I grew up, does this for me more than anything else," she shares. "I also love visiting Italy and France. Exploring the unique architecture, interior design and ambience of hotels and restaurants in these regions provides me with a deep well of inspiration. It's this immersion in diverse environments that refreshes my creativity and helps me bring innovation and a sense of worldly elegance to my work. The distinct blend of historical and modern elements I encounter in my travels is influential ... it tells a story and that is what I'm trying to do in my clients' spaces."
